

Issues in Aging Annual Conference

WAYNE STATE
UNIVERSITY
INSTITUTE OF GERONTOLOGY

22nd YEAR

Cutting Edge Programming For Professionals

Entering its 22nd year, the Institute of Gerontology's Issues in Aging Conference is one of the longest running, well-recognized professional conferences of its kind. Through the dedicated efforts of the IOG faculty, this conference provides health professionals with two full days of expert presentations that earn continuing education credits.

Issues in Aging is held locally, but attendees come from across the tri state area and speakers from across the nation. Day One focuses on dementia and Alzheimer's research and treatment. Day Two is devoted to physical and mental health strategies. The conference draws over 400 attendees each year from a variety of health fields. Surveys consistently report ratings in the "Outstanding" range, citing that its roster equals or exceeds national conferences on these topics.
